

COMPANY DESCRIPTION

A. Nature of Service

Lhoopa Inc., established in 2018 by Marc-Olivier Caillot and Sabrina Tan, is a pioneering Property Technology (PropTech) company dedicated to solving the Philippines' massive 6.5 million affordable housing backlog. Recognizing the heavy, manual inefficiencies of traditional real estate development, the founders engineered a completely new approach by applying high-level, Wall Street-style data models to the local housing market. Rather than relying on legacy real estate systems or massive in-house construction conglomerates, Lhoopa functions as a tech-enabled property developer and decentralized marketplace, providing highly accessible house-and-lot properties tailored for low- to mid-income consumers, with over 90% of their clients being first-time homeowners.

At its core, Lhoopa operates on proprietary, handcrafted logic and robust data systems, leveraging advanced artificial intelligence and predictive market analytics to pinpoint underutilized properties and identify high-growth areas while mitigating investment risks. This data-driven foundation powers a bespoke app ecosystem that functions like a real-time trading room, enabling seamless coordination across a decentralized network of localized workflows—from sourcing sites and vetting opportunities to managing construction milestones, handling sales documentation, and connecting buyers with financing partners.

Through this comprehensive suite of applications, Lhoopa removes bureaucratic layers and directly empowers on-the-ground partners by integrating over 4,000 local brokers, independent agents, small-to-medium contractors, and notaries into a unified execution network. This system accelerates the turnaround time of affordable housing, often delivering homes in as little as six months, while also generating thousands of steady, localized jobs. By providing a reliable income stream through its partner hub, Lhoopa enables many local builders and professionals to remain with their families in the Philippines rather than seeking work overseas.
